

511 Santa Barbara Road • Berkeley, CA 94707 • Tel 510-333-1875 • Web www.eduweavers.org

Rod Beckstrom, President and CEO
Internet Corporation of Assigned Names and Numbers
4676 Admiralty Way, Suite 330
Marin del Rey, CA 90292-6601

August 30, 2009

Dear Mr. Beckstrom,

On behalf of all the students and educators in the eduWeavers school-to-school partnership network, I am writing to support DotGreen's application for the new .green Top Level Domain (TLD).

eduWeavers believes that education for the 21st century must include opportunities for reciprocal learning and partnership development between students across the globe. Creating sustainable school-to-school partnerships that support student-driven and classroom-driven initiatives to share, inspire, and create is part of our mission. Many of our globally-connected students are the future thinkers who will collaborate together and respond to crises like climate change, poverty, and health security.

DotGreen offers a formidable vision: create a TLD that leverages all that is collaborative in the Green Movement. This vision of global connectedness around a TLD that is at once sustainable and generative of resources for grassroots organizations committed to the "green" cause is exciting and innovative. It is an ideal TLD for Web 2.0.

Just as eduWeavers seeks to connect students across demographic and global boundaries through a model that is at once sustainable and innovative, DotGreen's TLD will connect communities, businesses, and industries in a green movement that cannot be successful without a compelling online presence. Their non-profit status cannot be underestimated in their application process. It validates their vision and makes the TLD an even more compelling choice for anyone interested in identifying with the "green" movement.

DotGreen has our strong support for their vision and implementation model.

Sincerely yours,

Stacey Kertsman
Director, eduWeavers